AMERICAN ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION.

The American Economic Association is an organization composed mainly of persons interested in the study of political economy or the economic phases of political and social questions. As may be seen by examining the list of members and subscribers printed in this volume, all universities and most prominent colleges in the country are represented in the Association by their teachers of political economy and related subjects. A large number of members also are drawn from those interested as business men, journalists, lawyers or politicians, in the theories of political economy or, more often, in their applications to social life. There are also more than one hundred subscribers, nearly all being large libraries.

The annual meetings of the Association bring together for professional and social intercourse many teachers and public men. In 1897 and 1898 the American Economic Association met in joint sessions and less formal gatherings with the American Historical Association and it is now expected that this custom, in force at the first two meetings of the Economic Association in 1885 and 1887, will be continued at Detroit in 1900. The annual meetings contribute not a little to create and cement acquaintanceship and friendship between teachers of economics and cognate subjects in different institutions, and so to counteract any tendency to particularism which the geographical separation and the diverse traditions of American colleges might be deemed to foster.

The Publications of the Association, a complete list of which is printed at the end of this volume, were begun in March, 1886. The first series of eleven volumes, comprising over six thousand three hundred pages, was completed by a general index in 1897. Meanwhile, in January, 1896, the bi-monthly Economic Studies were begun. Of these four volumes, containing, with the supplementary Hand-Books of the annual meetings, nearly six hundred pages each, have now appeared. In addition to the Studies there were also issued, in a new series of the Publications, two large monographs, one a pamphlet of 400 pages on the cotton industry of the United States, the other an elaborate critical discussion, written by more than twenty statistical experts and extending to five hundred pages, of the methods and results of the Federal Census. It is believed that some of the suggestions of improvement made in this volume will bear good fruit in the census of 1900.

The Council of the Association has directed that in the future the Studies be discontinued, and that a quarterly publication of octavo form be issued under the title of Publications of the American Economic Association. The first number of this issue contains the Proceedings of the Twelfth Annual Meeting. It is intended to add to the quarterly numbers, from time to time, larger monographic supplements as the condition of the treasury and the supply of suitable manuscript may make possible. But in any case members and subscribers are assured of issues sufficient in quantity and quality to afford a generous equivalent for their dues.

The officers of the American Economic Association and the contributors to its Publications receive no pay for their services. Thus the entire receipts of the Association are expended in printing and circulating the Publications and in the slight expenses attendant upon the annual meetings. Any member, therefore, may regard his annual dues either as a subscription to an economic publication, a payment for membership in a scientific association, or a contribution to a publication fund for aiding in the publication of valuable manuscript that might not be accepted by a publishing house governed primarily by motives of profit, and that could not be published by the writer without incurring too heavy a burden of expense.

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

NAME.

This Society shall be known as the AMERICAN ECONOMIC ASSOCIATION.

ARTICLE II.

OBJECTS.

1. The encouragement of economic research, especially the historical and statistical study of the actual conditions of industrial life.

2. The publication of economic monographs.

3. The encouragement of perfect freedom of economic discussion. The Association, as such, will take no partisan attitude, nor will it commit its members to any position on practical economic questions.

4. The establishment of a bureau of information designed to aid members in their economic studies.

ARTICLE III.

MEMBERSHIP.

Any person may become a member of this Association by paying three dollars, and after the first year may continue a member by paying an annual fee of three dollars. On payment of fifty dollars any person may become a life member, exempt from annual dues.¹

ARTICLE IV.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

The Council may elect foreign economists of distinction, not exceeding twenty-five in number, honorary members of the Association. Each honorary member shall be entitled to receive all reports and publications of the Association.

ARTICLE V.

OFFICERS.

The officers of the society shall consist of a President, three Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, a Treasurer, a Publication Committee and a Council.

ARTICLE VI.

COUNCIL.

1. The Council shall consist of an indefinite number of members of the society, chosen, with the exception of the original members, for three years. It shall have power to fill all vacancies in its membership, and may add to its number.

2. It shall elect the President, Vice-Presidents, Secretary, and Treasurer, which officers, with the Chairman of the Publication Committee, shall constitute an Executive Committee with such power as the Council may entrust to it.

3. The Council shall organize itself into a number of standing committees upon the various lines of research undertaken. These committees shall prepare reports from time to time upon such subjects relating to their respective departments as they may select, or as may be referred to them by the Council. These reports shall be presented to the Council at its regular or special meetings and be open to discussion. All papers offered to the society shall be referred to the appropriate committees before being read in the Council.

4. The Council shall have charge of the general interests of the society, and shall have power to call meetings and determine what reports, papers, or discussions are to be printed, and may adopt any rules or regulations for the conduct of its business not inconsistent with this constitution.

5. The Council shall elect a Committee on Publications, which shall consist of six members, so classed that after the first election the term of two members shall expire each year. This committee shall have charge of and responsibility for the scientific publications of the Association.

ARTICLE VII.

AMENDMENTS.

Amendments, after having been approved by a majority of the Council, may be adopted by a majority vote of the members present at any regular meeting of the Association.

BY-LAWS.

1. The President of the Association, who shall be ex-officio a member of the Council, shall preside at all meetings of the Council and Association, and perform such other duties as may be assigned to him by the Council. In case of inability to perform his duties, they shall devolve upon the Vice-Presidents in the order of their election, upon the Secretary and Treasurer, and upon the Chairman of the Standing Committees, in the order in which the committees are mentioned in the list.

2. The Secretary shall keep the records of the Association, and perform such other duties as the Council may assign to him.

3. The Treasurer shall receive and have the custody of the funds of the Association, subject to the rules of the Council.

4. The following Standing Committees shall be organized :

- (1). On Labor.
- (2). On Transportation.
- (3). On Trade.
- (4). On Public Finance.
- (5). On Industrial and Technical Education.
- (6). On Exchange.
- (7). On General Questions of Economic Theory.
- (8). On Statistics.
- (9). On Teaching Political Economy.

The Executive Committee may appoint such special committees as it may deem best.

5. At any meeting called by the general summons of the President, five members shall constitute a quorum.

6. Papers offered for the consideration of the Council shall be referred by the Secretary, each to its appropriate committee.

7. In order to encourage economic research, the Association proposes to render pecuniary assistance in the prosecution of the same, and to offer prizes for the best monographs upon selected topics. It stands ready to accept and administer any fund placed at its disposal for either purpose.

8. The Executive Committee shall have power at any time to add new members to the Council.

9. The Executive Committee shall assign all members of the Council to one of the Standing Committees, and shall appoint the Chairmen of the Committees.

10. It shall be the duty of the Chairmen of the respective Committees to organize and direct the work of the same, under the general control of the Council.
